In my position as the Division Director for Employment and Training Programs (Marin County Health and Human Services Dept) and Marin County Workforce Development Board Director, I worked closely with our Probation Department and saw a definite need for skill development and collaboration building among individuals and organizations working with justice-involved youth and adults. I had attended training that Larry Robbin presented on this topic, and I reached out to him to work with my staff, partners from community based organizations, the Probation Department, and State Parole in Marin County.

Larry provided a comprehensive series of trainings focused on the skills and strategies required to improve the employment and job retention of justice involved youth and adults. The audience for the trainings was quite diverse. It included management and staff from a wide range of organizations and in various roles in this work. The material Larry presented was very innovative and yet extremely practical and it appealed to this broad audience.

Larry's presentation was informed by his long history of work with programs and individuals that served people who were justice involved. In the course of the series of trainings, he covered increasing employment motivation, overcoming barriers to employment, job search strategies, interviewing techniques, understanding employer perspectives and job retention. Attendees completed evaluations for every session, and the overall feedback was excellent. I would recommend Larry for organizations that want to improve the employment outcomes of justice involved individuals. For further information, please feel free to contact me.
